Our History

The historic Brown Palace's Ship Tavern opened August 24, 1934 to celebrate the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the end of Prohibition. The room was designed by Denver architect Alan Fisher and is one of the 7 oldest bars in Denver. Prior to opening Ship Tavern the space was originally used as two shops and part of the first bar. In the 1910s, it was converted into The Lounge, which served High Tea and cocktails to ladies only.

The concept for Ship Tavern came about by accident when Claude "C.K." Boettcher procured a dozen replicas of famous seafaring vessels on a trip to Cape Cod and presented them to his wife Edna Boettcher as a gift. She was not thrilled with having to turn her Capitol Hill mansion, today's Governor's Residence, into a mini-museum for model sailing ships.

Fortunately she was aware of C.K.'s plans to open a new bar in his downtown hotel to mark the return of legal drinking and Edna leveraged the opportunity. Her suggestion that the new establishment be designed in a maritime theme showcasing the model sailing vessels resonated with C.K. and Ship Tavern was launched.

The historically-correct and meticulously crafted scale models are still on display in the Tavern for all to enjoy. They include replicas of the Flying Cloud, the most well-known and beloved of the mid-nineteenth-century clipper ships; the Yacht America, the first Yankee vessel to capture the World Yachting Championship Cup from the British; and the Thomas Lawson, the only seven-masted clipper ship ever to sail the high seas. Exotic polished wood from around the world, authentic rigging on the center "Crow's Nest", nautical prints and maps, and an old ship's clock combine to create a seafaring ambiance unique to the Ship Tavern.

The Ship Tavern is the oldest of the hotel's three main restaurants and much of the décor has not changed. Today, guests come to enjoy the vintage pub atmosphere with live entertainment Wednesday through Saturday evenings, locally brewed beer, and the best prime rib in Denver.
